20 initial assessment at the appropriate facility by a licensed mental 21 health professional within twelve (12) hours of being placed in 22 protective custody for the purpose of determining whether emergency 23 detention of the consumer is warranted. The initial assessment of 24 the consumer shall include an appropriate screening and assessment process, as determined by the Department of Mental Health and 7 returned by an officer immediately to the point where the consumer

8 was taken into protective custody and released or taken to the home
9 or residence of such consumer or to an alternative facility. If the 10 home or residence of the consumer is a nursing home or group home,
11 such home shall not refuse the return of the consumer to his or her 12 residence.

13 3. If, upon examination, the licensed mental health 14 professional determines that the consumer is a person requiring

18 basis for the determination, and the consumer shall be detained in 19 emergency detention for a period not to exceed seventy-two (72)
20 hours, excluding weekends and holidays, except upon a court order 21 authorizing detention pending a hearing on a petition requesting 22 involuntary commitment or treatment.

23 4. During the emergency detention period:
24

1 a. a mental health evaluation of the consumer shall be

2 as provided in subsection A of this section; and

3 3. The executive director or person in charge or the designee
4 shall provide for a mental health evaluation of the consumer by two

8 and will not require treatment beyond the period of detention, the 9 consumer shall be discharged and returned by an officer to the point 10 where he or she was taken into protective custody, or if the 11 consumer had not been in protective custody, the consumer shall be 12 taken to the home or residence of the consumer or to an alternative 13 facility. If the home or residence of the consumer is a nursing 14 home or group home, it shall not refuse the return of the consumer
15 to his or her residence.
