Research Analysis

The committee substitute for HB 2921 recognizes Native American languages as a language art. Native American languages may be counted in fulfilling core curriculum requirements, and will be granted the same credit as a world language. Native American languages may be taught by a qualified teacher that holds a valid traditional or alternative teaching certificate, or a teacher that holds a valid certificate in Native American languages issued by the State Board of Education and qualifies for alternative placement or is supervised by a highly qualified teacher.
