Senate Amendments to HB 2321 include striking the entire contents of the engrossed measure, and inserting language that authorizes school districts to offer in grades nine and above an elective course(s) on the Old and/or New Testament(s) of the Bible. The measure requires any such course to be religiously neutral, and for teachers to be certified in either social studies or literature.

Fiscal Analysis

There are no costs associated with this measure, as the course offering is permissive.

Long Term Fiscal Considerations

None
