Fiscal Analysis

The CCR provides that elections called for the primary purpose of the measure may be held at the time of a general election. Such an option for counties may reduce direct county elections costs. No measureable direct costs to add such a proposition to a general election ballot are anticipated. Should the number of ballot questions, for any issue before voters, be in sufficient number to require a second ballot page, costs would then be realized. However, the amendment itself has no measurable fiscal impact.
