Research Analysis

The committee substitute to HB 3999 provides that the court may limit or prohibit a person convicted of identity theft from accessing the internet and from possessing or using computers or other electronic communications or data storage devices or media. The court may also require the installation of computer monitoring software on computers possessed by or used by the person.

Fiscal Analysis

This measure would allow the courts to require the installation of computer monitoring software on the computers possessed by persons convicted of certain crimes related to identity theft. Officials with the Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC) have provided that they do not anticipate fiscal impact to the courts as the courts are not required to perform installation or provide any related devices. Therefore, in its current form, HB3999 is not anticipated to have an impact on state budget or appropriations.
