Fiscal Analysis

This measure designates certain roads and bridges to be named after specific people. According to the Oklahoma Department of Transportation (ODOT), the cost to place two signs, one each direction, is a total of $2160.00. There are 18 different cites for designated names within the bill; therefore, the greatest possible cost to the state is $38,880.00. The cost is most likely going to be less than that as ODOT only pays for the signs of those who have died in the line of duty. At first glance, that looks to be about 3 to 5 of those signs would qualify, so the actual cost to ODOT will be far below the max amount.
