Research Analysis

HB 4275, as introduced, requires the Board of Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services to make certification rules and standards for certification of behavioral health case managers who are employed by a municipality or county and employed by organizations certified by the Department of Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services. Individuals can only use the title "certified behavioral health case manager" or "certified peer recovery support specialist" if they meet certain criteria.

Fiscal Analysis

HB 4275 expands certification standards for behavioral health case managers and peer recovery support specialists to include individuals employed by a municipality, county, or an organization certified by the Department of Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services (ODMHSAS). In its current form, HB 4275 is not expected to have a direct fiscal impact on the state budget or appropriations.
